> The following aneodote, the China Gazette says, is told by one who had it direct from Admiral Lang bimself. One night the gallant Admiral whose absonce from the Chinese navy our Celestial friends have now such grave reasons to deplore, returned to the Tingques at a late hour to find no one on the deek of the great ship, which seemed atterly described. The sentry's loaded rifle and bayonet was lying idly against the bulwarks, the contry himself was invisible. The Admiral, need to this characteristio lazity, proceeded to the state room of Ad miral Ting the present commander of the Chinose naval forces, and there found that worthy partner being the sentry. Rays leaved from the era of the English officer, and though he did not may much the sentry thought it prudent to return to his duty. Then Admiral Long " or at straight " for his Colustial confière, and asked him what in the name of thunder strange proceedings meant. Admiral Ting it very admir and blandly said that all officers and men being away from the ship that night he felt lonesome; and having no one else with whom he could pleasantly while away th time, he had sont his boy for the soutry, to a quiet robbor, which the entrance of Admiral

Lang so rudely interrupted.
